

Deloitte School of Tax IFRS Update and Tax Treatment

There are a number of new International Financial Reporting Standards (IFRS) that have recently come into effect or will shortly be coming into effect. In order to carry out tax compliance and tax accounting functions properly, an in-depth understanding of the business and finance implications that these standards introduce is necessary to ensure the correct tax treatment.

This workshop focuses on the principles contained in these newly introduced standards as well as the resultant tax implications that will arise therefrom.

The specific standards that this workshop will focus on are;

- IFRS 9 Financial instruments;
- IFRS 15 Revenue from contracts with customers; and
- IFRS 16 Leases

IFRS 9 Financial Instruments

IFRS 9 Financial Instruments was introduced on 24 July 2014 by the International Accounting Standards Board (IASB) as the final portion of its comprehensive response to the financial crisis. Included in the changes brought in by IFRS 9 is a logical model for classification and measurement of financial assets, a single, forward looking 'expected loss' impairment model and a substantially reformed approach to hedge accounting. The financial reporting of any entity, not just financial institutions, will be significantly impacted by these changes.

The standard will come into effect for financial years beginning on or after 1 January 2018.

This session will go through a summary of this standard as well as the resulting tax consequences for companies with financial instruments.

IFRS 15 Revenue from Contracts with Customers

IFRS 15 has replaced the previous Revenue standards IAS 18 (Revenue) and IAS 11 (Construction contracts) and their related guidance. For financial reporting, revenue recognition is arguably one of the most important and controversial topics. IFRS 15 is intended to be an improved standard for revenue recognition. IFRS 15 is mandatory for periods beginning on or after 1 January 2018.

This session will summarise the requirements of this new standard and provide insight into any changes in tax treatment arising from IFRS 15.

IFRS 16 Leases

With the introduction of this new standard, in principle, lessees will be most affected, as they should recognise leases in the statement of financial position by capitalising right of use assets and lease liabilities. The purpose is to ensure visibility of all leases. This will enable investors to make better investment decisions. For annual periods beginning on or after 1 January 2019, IAS 17 along with three interpretation notes will be replaced by the new IFRS 16 Leases.

This session will discuss the above changes and focus on what this means from an income tax and value-added tax perspective.
